

A super week

Fueled by fresh ideas and energy, the Junior Class hosted the annual McDonald's Week fundraiser Nov. 17 - Nov. 20. The theme, which took its inspiration from Nintendo, resonated with Marksmen of all ages, especially those of Lower School. As shown by the crowds around McDonald's, there was no shortage of involvement throughout the entire community.

1 MARIO KART Racing around the parking lot at McDonald's, seniors Mahir Karim (front) and Alden James (back) compete against students from other grades in the first daily event.

2 THE BIG JOUST Battling one and other with foam swords and shields, senior Charlie O'Brien (left) and sophomore Will Wood (right) go for the gold during the McDonald's Week All-Day Day, which was held Nov. 18 and featured innovative mini games to entertain students throughout the event.

3 MAGIC MAN Science instructor Ken Owens '89 performs as "Alakazam" during his annual chemistry show, which was held on the morning of Nov. 19. Owens is shown pouring liquid nitrogen to excite the crowd.

4 MORNING MADNESS Filling the restaurant from end to end, Marksmen, donning the McDonald's Week T-shirt, gather in the morning to chow down on Egg McMuffins and hot cakes.
