

Senior Michala Huckabay plays her snare drum during a halftime performance. Huckabay has played in the band since 5th grade. "I decided to stay in band after sixth grade because I had heard that I would get a scholarship for participating for four years," Huckabay said.

After quickly removing his shoulder pads and rushing into the end zone where the rest of the band was waiting, Junior Tyler Miller marches along the field during halftime. "It is very stressful having to go from remembering football plays to remembering band marches."

Junior Kelsey Tollett proudly trumpets the Albany Lions fight Song for the last halftime performance of the year. "My favorite thing about in being in band is, getting to attend all of the football games. It really gives us the opportunity to get involved in the game," Tollett said.

Lining up on the 50 yard line, the band plays the theme of the classic movie "Rocky". "I really liked playing for the town and helping give the fans spirit," Freshman Elise Brown said.

MARCHING TO A NEW BEAT

Keeping a strong, steady beat, the drum line marches along the field during halftime. "After being in band all through high school, my favorite moment would definitely have to be going to State and marching on the field," said Senior Marquis Thurman

Breaking apart at the 50 yard line, the Ragin' Red Band keeps the crowd pumped up during halftime. The band practices everyday during second period at the practice field behind the cafeteria.

Joined by a few junior high band members, the brass section trumpets the notes of the fight song. Director John Stockdale picked the junior high students after the hard work they put into practicing throughout the semester.
