TAKE IN THE AUSTIN MUSIC SCENE

I WENT TO FUNFUNFUN FEST

in November, and it was amazing. My friend Jordan and I left and started waiting for our favorite band, alt J, to play at 1:00. They didn't start until 7:00 and it was totally worth it. They're my favorite band because they're so different and inventive. We were in the front row and the lead singer, Joe Newman, smiled at me. I almost died!"

Attending campus events

AFTER SCHOOL

Through SACRIFICES junior keeps active in groups he ENJOYS

The lights are out in some wings of the building and the gates are down, but junior Ariel Rosete is still at school.

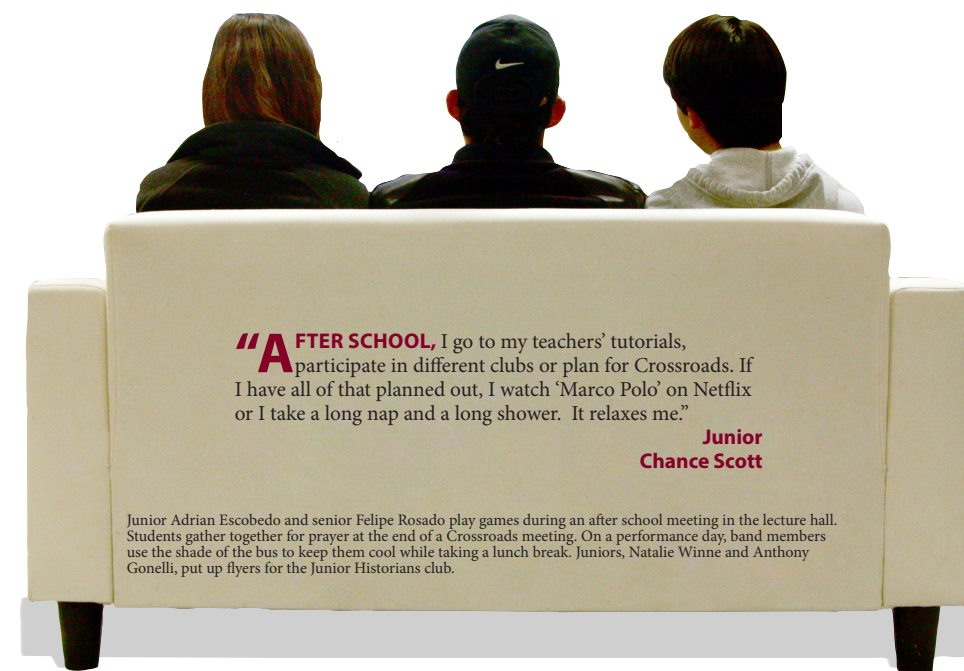

Showing up before the custodial staff arrives to practice with the band and staying late after school to attend meetings and work at events for groups like the National Honor Society, Rosete fills his schedule with school related activities.

"I'm the treasurer of Solar Club and I'm in the National Honor Society, the International Baccalaureate program and band," Rosete said.

Off campus, Rosete also takes an active part in his church's youth ministry program.

For each group, there is a required time commitment which quickly fills up Rosete's schedule.

"I have to make sacrifices," Rosete said, "like not spending time with some people, watching movies and playing video games. But I think it's the right choice. It will all be worth it in the end." story by Hannah Mohr

"AFTER SCHOOL, I go to my teachers' tutorials, participate in different clubs or plan for Crossroads. If I have all of that planned out, I watch 'Marco Polo' on Netflix or I take a long nap and a long shower. It relaxes me."

Junior Adrian Escobedo and senior Felipe Rosado play games during an after school meeting in the lecture hall. Students gather together for prayer at the end of a Crossroads meeting. On a performance day, band members use the shade of the bus to keep them cool while taking a lunch break. Juniors, Natalie Winne and Anthony Gonelli, put up flyers for the Junior Historians club.
