

"I got asked to homecoming with a pizza and a note saying 'This may be cheesy, but will you go to homecoming with me?' It was very cute."

"When the Mojoes threw the powder it looked cool until it got all over our band uniforms."

"Tonight I played my last volleyball game ever in a White Oak uniform. The past four years have been one heck of a ride."

"Do right."

"N-N-NEC, C-C-CKS. NEC-CKS, NECKS!"

"Coach Boyett is awesome because he really emphasizes that hard work pays off."

"A cut above"

"I stink at time management. I can never get around to doing anything."

ROUGHNECK 2016
MOMENTS

"I Believe"

"Calculus is only passable with a mastery of magic."

"My favorite time of the day is recess."

"I only shave once a week so when it gets to about Thursday and Friday, I'm always wearing a high collared shirt."

"Win the play, win the day."

"The worst possible moment I can imagine is when you realize you forgot to do Yoder's homework."

"When I walk through the coach's hall I feel like a champion because they're all giving me fists."

"The Mojoes are crazy dudes."

"We're more than just classmates or a community. We're a family."

"Mr. Hinkle has to snap a locker lock almost every day."

ROUGHNECK 2016
MOMENTS

"When I went to Chang Mia in the Himalayas' I woke up, went running, and everyone was staring at me because I was a foreigner. I truly felt like a celebrity, everyone was looking at me!"

"The fish pond is so awkward in the mornings."

"Love is when you give up your last taco from Taco Bell to another person."

"They kicked me out of Books-a-Million for reading my book on the floor."

"If everybody can do it, the bar isn't high enough."

"There is absolutely no greater feeling than walking through that tunnel on Friday nights."

OPENING

the year with big wins at football games or expecting another team to advance to the state level, a new generation of middle schoolers nervously finds their clique at the fish pond or another seventh grade team steps onto the court for the first time. Moments when elementary students cling to their mother's hand or win awards at the weekly Champs Assembly. The moments are the same every year. This year, the approach is different. The story is told as it happened, from a chronological point of view. The months creep by slowly, but as a whole, the school year is a blur, with this book serving as the timeline of the 2015-16 memories. It's these life changing moments, the moments we make, that eventually make us who we are.

SPORTS

In SPORTS, it's an athlete's nature to make the moments. Whether it's sliding on the little league field on a rainy baseball practice day or completing a ropes obstacle course with your volleyball team, it's these times that unify teammates and create friendships that last beyond high school. Learning to serve a volleyball or dribble a basketball are obvious skills that must be developed, but it's a necessary component of an athlete's repertoire. Splashing at field day with friends or developing eye-hand coordination by playing four square on the playground are activities that teach sportsmanship. It's the moment in an intense game where every dribble and shot can determine the outcome of the game. It's the moment when seniors shoulder the responsibility of a one point loss against district foe, Waskom. "It's demoralizing to lose such a close game that you know you should have won," Jeremy Patak [12] said. "It just makes you want to work harder so it doesn't happen again." Every loss and victory make up just a portion of the moments spent in a Roughneck uniform.

After trailing for the majority of the second half, Waskom's senior point guard Kaleb Haynes drove to the basket, drew the foul, and made the shot to tie the game with less than 10 seconds left. He would later convert the free throw to give Waskom the 51-50 lead. White Oak senior Landry Sheridan would rush down the court to heave the last second shot, but it wouldn't fall. "It was hard because we had dug ourselves a hole the first quarter and worked so hard to come back," Sheridan said. "We were winning most of the second half and then for them to make a free throw to win was tough because there was nothing you could do to guard him and make him miss."

Shaking hands, Scott Floyd presents Kyler Dennison [12] with the Suzanne Woodburn memorial scholarship. The scholarship was presented in her honor to Dennison because she mentored him all year before her passing in May. Floyd's fellow leadership team members, assistant superintendent Mitzi Neely and Michael Gras felt this was an appropriate way to finish out her work. "I will attend Southern Oregon University and plan on graduating there," Dennison said. My major is going to be Computer Science.

REFERENCE

It's our point in life, it's the moments that make us. Whether it's running in the Dopey Challenge at Disney World or serving on a medical mission trip to Honduras, these are the instances that define your character. Leading your team in competitive cheer or singing the national anthem at your twirling competition are the times that determine what the future may hold. Fighting through a sickness that keeps you from the thing you love the most or playing the tuba in hopes of finding a future career are the moments that will not be lost in this school year. It's a moment of remembrance for Suzanne Woodburn, who lost a courageous battle against cancer on May 11. It's a moment of carrying out her passion for teaching. "We have decided that the one thing Suzanne left undone is something we can finish," White Oak ISD Leadership team said. "She has been mentoring a student this year to prepare him for college. We want to honor Suzanne and what she has given our students all of these years through this." Through a district wide collaborative effort, Kyler Dennison [12] embarks on his new journey in Oregon with the assistance of a scholarship totaling over $2,500. "There is no greater tribute to her than to finish what she started," assistant superintendent Mitzi Neely said. "She had dedicated her year to teaching him the ins and outs of what he would need to know to be successful." Even in the moments she felt her worst, helping Kyler reach his potential was the first thing on her mind. This was her defining moment.

CLOSING

the 2016 school year, don't forget that we beat Spring Hill by the largest margin in school history or that the journalism team brought home their fifth consecutive state championship, but also remember the moment that you made your first cut on your cat during anatomy dissections. Don't forget what it felt like to desperately search for a friendly face at the fish pond or the nerves you felt when you first donned an official Roughneck or Ladyneck jersey, but also remember the moments that you ate lunch in the library with the inaugural Roughneck Tech Club. Don't forget about the cup of water you covered as you scampered across the grass in your last official field day of elementary school, but also remember the evening you spent under the stars at the father/daughter dance. Don't forget about how scared you were on the first day of school as your mother drove away or your reward for showing the most generosity in your class, but always remember the Grandparent's Day program that you practiced for. When you are battling through life, remember the wise words of your beloved high school principal, telling you to "Do Right." It's also the moment when hear "I Believe" in your head because he did. It's the moment you realize not only is this your last time to stand on the stage as a Roughneck, but his too. It's those life changing moments, the moments we made, that made us who we are.
