Trojans showcase skills in areas of expertise

Engineering

Trainers

BY Khori Bradford

Exhausted after the game, players Brady Rabbitt, 12, John Davis, 11 and trainer Alice Odell, 12, walk off the field. The trainers were the backbone of the football team, as they attended every game and practice. "We really depend on the trainers. That is some high quality h2o they give us," Rabbitt, said. photo by Teri Vimahi

Varsity football player Sampson Tasini, 11 is getting checked by Dr. Hughes for an injury at one of his final JV games. "It did not hurt a lot, I was just glad it did not put me out for the season," Tasini said. photo by Teri Vimahi

Before the competition, Tyler Averitt, 12 and Atif Hassan, 12, spend days perfecting and packing everything under the direction of team president Azim Daradiya, 12. "We usually stayed up all night perfecting our engineering logbook and drinking red lines before competition," Daradiya said. photo by Kevin Mulume

During Robotics Parker Frazer, 11 and Jason Smith, 11 make sure that the wheels fit just right on their robot. They made things work for their competition. "My motto was to keep it simple, shiny and sweet," Frazer said. photo by Kevin Mulume

Testing the arm of the robot Kyle Bradford, 12 assists Azim Daradiya, 12 and Atif Hassan, 12 to make sure when they get to competition they can score easily. "Robotics was a great experience. I loved the people and how it prepared me for a future in engineering," Bradford said. photo by Kevin Mulume

Being new to Robotics, Yunuen Avila, 12 tinkers with her robot. "I was glad they accepted me and that I got to help them get to Regionals," Avila said. photo by Kevin Mulume

Tyler Averitt, 12 dedicates his time to Robotics. "I loved being a part of the group and the building aspect of engineering," Averitt said. photo by Kevin Mulume

Cheerleaders

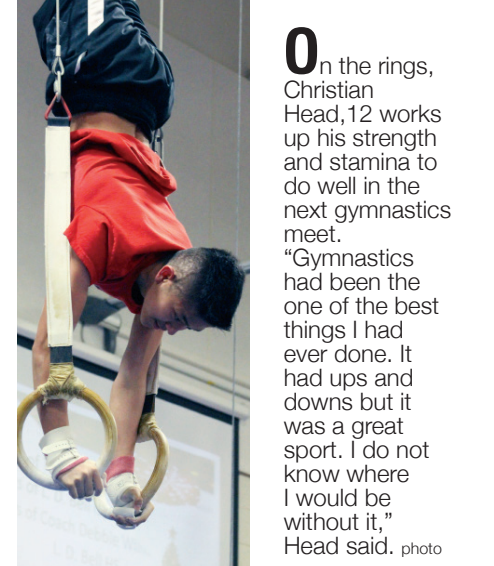

Smiling in formation for at the 2015-2016 Cheer State competition Sinclaire Jacobs, 11, Nicole Gonzalez, 12, Chloe Odell, 10, and Cheyann Miller, 10 keep their eye on the prize. "I loved being able to cheer with my friends and getting the crowd involved at the games," Jacobs said. photo by Yulissa Cortina

With a smile on her face, Jennifer Backhaus, 12 dances her heart out to do well for their very first competition. "At the first U.I.L. Cheer competition we were all nervous cause we worked so hard to prepare but it was fun, hence my facial expression," Backhaus said. photo by Yulissa Cortina

Centering Erin Jones', 12 bow, Nicole Gonzales, 12 helps her teammate stay sharp for the competition. "Cheer has brought me closer to my teammates and given me relationships that will last a lifetime," Gonzales said. photo by Yulissa Cortina

Before competition, Rylee Burk, 12, Chloe Odell, 10 and Anita Dabney, 12 go to Starbucks to kill time before their competition. "They were my best friends and we liked just goofing around and having a good time," Burk said. photo by Yulissa Cortina

Athletes

Sydne McAllister, 12 stands in the pre-game huddle linked with her teammates and listening to coach Mia Langi. "Volleyball was like my family. The coaches were there to help and guide you. I learned a lot about myself and life in volleyball," McAllister said. photo by Ashley Pestrue

After running in the first meet, Kyle Mooneyham, 12, Jonathan Stewart and teammates eat together at Cici's Pizza. "I loved to run, and cross country was so amazing because we always pushed each other to do our best," Mooneyham said. photo by Sean Martinez

Musicians

Watching the Drum Major, Ashley Kim, 11 performs during the half time show of the Colleyville football game. "Playing music was a way for me to express myself. Performing for an audience was an experience that was unforgettable," Kim said. photo by Leah Thye

Staring straight ahead, Christian Gonzales, 10 and Michael Christopher, 11 focus on their steps and music so that they don't mess up during their performance. "Band was hard work and the outcome was fantastic. The best part was sharing the success with my friends," Gonzales said. photo by Leah Thye

Playing her solo in the second act of the marching band's show, Allison Price, 12 serenades the audience with her English horn. "Being in front of a crowd was invigorating. Once the performance was done, I could not wait for the next one," Price said. photo by Leah Thye
