HULA HOOPLA

A Rally Full of Relays

A hula hoop competition is just one of the many wacky relay activities in the pep-rally. Andre Gibson (8) was just one part of the relay team. His job was hula hooping. Other team members had to dance for 30 seconds or pop a balloon by sitting on it. Photo by Milla Gary

Fun with Cheer!

Sporting her volleyball uniform along with some crazy socks, Ciara Conway (7) heads through the tunnel of pom poms, just before the cheerleaders performed a dance to Uptown Funk. The active member of the seventh grade volleyball team supported both her team and spirit week at the pep rally. Photo by Milla Gary

At the Big Game

"Red black and white, Kealing fight, fight, fight!" At the thrilling homecoming game, Sirena Barron-Romero (7) cheers on the team, leading by 15. Cheerleaders kept their head in the game and rallied the crowd. The spirited girls who made up the cheer squad made sure to stay focused and positive, supporting the team toward a winning game (and season.) "I was excited because I wanted to see my team play there hardest and because the band playing sounded really good," said Sirena Barron-Romero. Photo by Addy Lemoine

It's all fun and games

The notes of an empowering song played by the band floated through the field, so loud it could be heard over the roar of the crowd and the shouting from the sidelines. Students and faculty were all pepped up from spirit week, showing of their school pride more than ever. With a stronger than typical turnout, the homecoming game added some extra pressure. "It's very hard being a football player. You have to manage your time wisely and work well under all the pressure," said Jimmy Walker (8). With the game being the highlight of the spirit week, students were excited, participating in the days' activities and themes.

From Spirit Day on Monday to Tuesday's pep rally and Friday's homecoming dance, hornets enjoyed the bustle of the October week.

One of the key kick off events for the week was the homecoming pep rally, which gave students the opportunity to hear from players, cheer on their team, and enjoy some entertainment. Ms. Pena-Brooks kept it lively as emcee, leading the audience. But it was the teachers and students who jumped right in and cut loose, dancing and goofing off in the silly games that really got the crowd pumped up and into the competitive spirit of the week. It set a tone of fun and reminded everyone to enjoy. Story by Ava Notes
