

RAIN OR SHINE it's happening

tiger day escapes rainy forecast

As Tiger Day approached, the prediction of rain moved some of the more popular games inside.

Many students expected for Tiger Day not to be as fun as it has in the past. While some students didn't enjoy themselves, others had a great time.

The weather cleared off and the sun shone for the hours Tiger Day was held.

Seventh grader Sarah Youngblood, liked how Tiger Day was inside.

"I liked having the games inside because there was air conditioning," Youngblood said. "I'm not a big fan of sweating. The worst thing that happened was that I never won a cupcake when I played Musical Chairs."

Fortunately, there was no rain to be seen on Tiger Day and most students were relieved.

Sixth grader Chloe Wright was nervous that the rain would ruin her first Tiger Day.

"I got kind of got scared when I heard that Tiger Day could be rained out, but when it didn't I got excited," Wright said. "My favorite part about the day was when I got my face painted and my hair (colored)."

Eighth grader Saad Rafiq thinks that the school should have had all the games outside. "My least favorite thing about Tiger Day was that the cool games were not outside," Rafiq said. "I think that we should have not listened to the weather."

This was the first Tiger Day experience for sixth grader Eleanor Corbett.

"I think Tiger Day could be inside or outside and still be a lot of fun," Corbett said. "The only thing I didn't like was that the lines were long and there was no car bash."

Tiger Day is a way for students to relax and have fun with their friends while raising money for their teacher's classrooms. This day at the school will remain one of the most popular events.

Trying to concentrate, sixth graders Ethan Moise and Cade Mellon try to pull out sticks without balls falling. This activity was held inside due to the rain. "I thought Tiger Day was fun because of all of the different activities," Mellon said. Photo by Aspen Kissinger.

Climbing up the rock wall, sixth graders Arianna Bussinger and Emilee Bullock try their best to make it to the top. The rock wall was one of many activities that were outside. "I love to climb, and the wall gave me a challenge and a chance to have a good time with my friends," Bussinger said. Photo by Aspen Kissinger
