Dance the Night Away ...

High school students of all ages enjoyed the prom planned by the junior class. The large dance floor provided by the venue, which was held May 7 at Fields Ranch near Borger, Texas, made dancing the night away "easy," attendees said, and many group dances included everyone there.

Promposal on a Higher Level

In addition to the regular prom festivities, principal Stephen Vanderpool went down on one knee to propose to his girl friend, Brooke Scott, to kick prom off with a surprise. Her response was "Yes!"

Their First

The freshman class attended their first prom in their high school prom career. "I love spending hours getting dressed up, to look my best to have fun and dance with friends all night long," K'Leigh Keesee said.

Better than the Last ...

Every prom planning committee's agenda is to plan a prom better than the last, and according to the sophomores, they hit the nail on the head. "This prom was better than last years because it was more organized and it was bigger," Lauren Kuehler said.

The Prom Planners

The junior class, as always, was in charge of planning prom. With the help of teacher sponsors Melissa Ritter and Jowannah Powers, they put together a prom to remember, one that included a red-carpet entry. "It (the event) was fairly easy to plan, because the location owner made it easy," Junior Jeff Marshall said.

Their Last ...

Senior year is full of lasts. The last first day, the last football game, the last prom. A familiar last memory is the music that you'll remember. "This prom was better than junior year's because we chose our own music," Cade Ruthardt said.
